

EXCLUSIVE: GET A GLIMPSE OF FOXY BINGO'S SWANKY NEW PAD

Britain's favourite fox invites OK! into his A-list lifestyle

HE'S THE NATION'S FAVOURITE BINGO PLAYING FOX, ADORED BY MUMS, WIVES AND SINGLE LADIES ACROSS THE UK!

He's on the guest list for every A-list party in town. And when he's not out on the celebrity circuit with a bevy of adoring fans in tow, he's busy making sure Foxybingo.com is packed full of great promotions: From giving away a £31k Guaranteed Jackpot on 31st March to organising his month long Foxy £100k Giveaway to his loyal fans.

And to top off a hectic March, Foxy is sponsoring the prestigious Celebrity Mum of the Year Award for 2011. He says 'I'm delighted to be involved. Get your votes in now at Foxybingo.com for the celeb mum who has most impressed you with balancing her public life with the demands of parenthood'. Foxy is clearly passionate about this award and says 'But we should celebrate all mums across the nation so I'm also giving out a special Foxy Mum of the Year award to one of our players and am asking all my fans to send in nominations!'

On top of all this OK! scored a spectacular coup when the star of Foxy Bingo agreed to take time out of his busy bingo lifestyle to give us an EXCLUSIVE guided tour around his swanky new pad.

Foxy answered the grand doors to his home in his trademark purple velvet suit and tailored shirt, looking every inch the star.

The high profile fox normally only invites the who's who of showbiz into his life, but today has decided to open his doors so his fans can have a peak at his extravagant new home.

Despite being a humble northerner, Foxy isn't known for his modesty, which explains his lavish mansion that is decked out in more designer furniture than a department store.

But even with all his success, the Lancashire-born bingo caller has managed to maintain his down to earth nature, which is part of his charm.

Speaking to OK!, Foxy said: 'My home is my sanctuary and although I like to invite my famous pals over for cocktails and canapés or to watch the football, I also like my chill out time too.

'Of course if there's a beautiful woman to share that quiet time with, then that's great too.'

'After all, I am one of Britain's most eligible bachelors', he joked with his cheeky northern grin across his face.

Despite not having a foxy lady to share his new abode with, we asked him if a relationship might be on his mind now that he's moved into the six bedroom mansion.

'If the right girl comes along that would be great, but at the moment I already seem to fall in love about ten times a day, so I'm not sure if The One is a realistic number', he joked again.

It's hard to get a straight answer from the charmer, but one could hardly blame Foxy for enjoying his lavish lifestyle and he seems to be the envy of an array of male and female fans.

Just before OK! arrived at Foxy's mansion, he was entertaining a string of celebrity pals for lunch and a sudden knock at the door by a late comer ended up being Big Brother star Nikki Grahame.

Nikki and Foxy have been close friends for years and the blonde bombshell regularly visits her pal at his London home.

The two are also constantly fighting off rumours of a budding romance after being photographed together constantly by paparazzi, but the friends are adamant that their relationship has only ever been platonic.

'Obviously she's tried to seduce me in the past but I always have to remind her it wouldn't work out...'

Foxy tells OK! 'Nikki is a great pal and because she's gorgeous the tabloids are always trying to make a story out of our relationship, but she's actually one of my few female friends who I can honestly say is just a friend.'

'Obviously she's tried to seduce me in the past but I always have to remind her it wouldn't work out... haha.'

It seems that Foxy brushes off tabloid gossip with the same humour he approaches everything, which is why he oozes such charm and vigour.

It is easy to understand why women throw themselves at him and why his personal life makes such popular front page tabloid news.

But he doesn't give much away in terms of his conquests and won't confirm rumours of a recent fling with one of Britain's most glamorous pop stars.

Instead he just smiles and gives a cheeky wink, saying: 'A gentleman never kisses and tells.'

With our time at Foxy's Den quickly running out, he then continued the tour of each perfectly designed room, as Nikki followed closely behind, explaining the inspiration behind each piece of furniture and artwork adorning the walls.

The place has a 1970s feel to it and because he entertains so many high profile guests here, he has plenty of space for those notorious parties that land him on the front page of the Sunday papers every now and again.

Foxy quickly wrapped up his tour, before Nikki reminded him that they had more friends arriving shortly.

They wouldn't specify which celebrity pals were on their way over but indicated that they wanted it to be a private affair.

On that note, Foxy ended the interview, but not before charismatically thanking OK! for helping him show his fans a slice of his life.

TO SEE FOXY BINGO WITH MORE OF HIS CELEBRITY PALS, GO TO WWW.FOXYBINGO.COM TO CHECK OUT WHAT HE'S UP TO AND SEE THE FANTASTIC CASH PRIZES UP FOR GRABS